An e-Journal of Archaeology and History of the Balkans in Late Antiquity

ISSN – pending assignment

Launched in 2025, The Chronicles of Haemus (CoH) is a pioneering peer-reviewed journal that seeks to bring together researchers specializing in the archaeology and history of the Balkans and surrounding regions during the Late Roman and Early Byzantine periods. Supported by the HAEMUS International Research Network, the journal fills a crucial gap in academic scholarship by promoting interdisciplinary and transnational collaboration on this central theme.

Focusing on the 3rd–8th centuries CE—a period of profound political and cultural transformation—the CoH explores diverse topics, from the transition of the Roman rule to the emergence of barbarian kingdoms, from the urban and economic changes to the evolution of cultural and religious practices.

By publishing articles primarily in English, but also in French, Italian, German, and Spanish, the CoH aims to serve as a platform for intellectual and scientific exchange, while showcasing research that is often inaccessible to the broader international academic community. Through a rigorous and inclusive editorial approach, the journal strives to advance understanding of a region and period too often regarded as marginal in European history.

The journal seeks to become a key reference for researchers, educators, students, and enthusiasts of history and archaeology by offering a forum for innovative scholarship. It particularly encourages interdisciplinary research and fresh perspectives, whether through case studies, regional syntheses, or cross-disciplinary thematic analyses. Moreover, the CoH welcomes contributions from early-career researchers, providing them with an opportunity to share their work with an international academic audience.

Submissions for publication in the CoH should be sent by e-mail directly to the editor-in-chief, Dominic Moreau (dominic.moreau@univ-lille.fr). Each submission (including text, illustrations, appendices, etc.) should be accompanied by an abstract of approximately 1,000 characters.

Authors are requested to follow the editorial guidelines available in PDF format: « Guidelines for Writing a Text » and « Presentation of the Final Bibliography ».

Each issue is published annually, from January to December. We warmly encourage you to submit your papers on the archaeology and history of the Balkans in Late Antiquity!
